ASCENDED MAUNA LOA

Distinguished Mountain
Climber Strongly Impressed.

"The silence and desolation on the summit of the great mountain of Mauna Loa is appalling, but it is grand and impressive."

Such is the conclusion of Henry G. Bryant of Philadelphia, President of the Geographical Society of Philadelphia, Secretary of the American Alpine Club and Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of London, who returned in the steamer Kinau last Saturday from a trip to the volcano of Kilauea, Hawaii, and a special trip from there to the great but presently inactive crater of Mokuawewe, on the extreme summit of Mauna Loa, more than 13,000 feet above the level of the sea.

Mr. Bryant has traveled all over the world and has climbed to the great heights. His most recent exploit was to ascend Popocatepetl in Mexico. He has gone to the summit of the Alps by the most dangerous routes, as well as to the peaks of the highest ranges in the Himalayas and America.

Mr. Bryant went to Kilauea two weeks ago, where he enjoyed the hospitality of Demosthenes at the Volcano House. He visited Kilauea several times and then expressed a desire to ascend Mauna Loa. The average resident of the Hawaiian Islands knows the great difficulties to be overcome in ascending Mauna Loa, of the great masses of rough and bristling lava beds to be crossed, of the lack of water, the absence of vegetation for fodder, the sufferings which horses have to undergo, of the extreme cold which one encounters at the summit, and the difficulty of breathing in that rarified region.

The traveler in this case secured the services of two of the veteran and most trusted volcano guides. They took along three horses. The party was three days and nights on the journey, and it was found to be as difficult as it had been reported.

The great hummocks of lava, with a-a and pahoehoe flows, were traversed slowly. At night the party camped on the edge of the timber line, and resumed the climb the next morning. On arrival at the crater of Mokuawewe Mr. Bryant spent some time inspecting the great hole. In the deep silence of that upper region he was impressed with the great rent in the mountain. He followed along the line of the lava flow of 1899. He had a great desire to descend the crater, but the guides refused to permit him to do so, owing to a superstitious fear that the wrath of Madam Pele would be visited upon them all for entering her abode. "One of the most beautiful sights I have ever seen in my experience," said Mr. Bryant yesterday, "was the sunrise seen from the top of Mauna Loa. Below us was a sea of clouds, and as the sun arose and peered over the fleecy mass the radiating beams and color were something beautiful to behold. And it was the same with the sunset. One would imagine that the summit of Mauna Loa is something of a peak and when standing on it one could look down upon the remainder of the island in any direction. The top is almost a table land and to see any lower portion of the island you have to go out on the slopes."

Mr. Bryant recorded his Mauna Loa experiences in the Volcano House record book.

PASSING OF GUS H. AEA

Was a Veteran Printer and Hawaiian Editor.

A veteran Hawaiian printer has passed in the death of Gus Hezekiah Aea, who died yesterday at the age of 47 years. He learned the trade in the old Pacific Commercial Advertiser office under Captain James Black, the oldest printer in Honolulu today, and the late James Auld, both of them experts in the art. From about 1893 until a few weeks ago "Gus" had been employed by the Hawaiian Gazette Co., but in his time he worked in most of the printeries of Honolulu. Two brothers who preceded him to the grave were also printers. Consumption carried him off. He leaves a wife, but no children surviving.

Part of Mr. Aea's career was spent in other branches of the newspaper business than the mechanical. Under Mr. Ballentyne's management of the Hawaiian Gazette Co. he was for a short time editor of the Kuokoa, the leading native paper. In 1899 he was assistant to Rev. H. H. Parker in the editorship of the same paper. Early in the nineties he was shipping reporter and collector for the Daily Bulletin Publishing Co., in the former capacity furnishing good English printer's copy. The funeral will probably take place this afternoon. It will be from the house of the deceased at the head of Emma street.

EVADES DEBTS AND WORRY

Maile Man Takes Unique Vacation and Escapes Annoying Creditors.

Worried by financial difficulties brought about by speculation, a Rockland (Me.) business man solved the problem of evading his troublesome creditors by taking an inexpensive vacation for two months, says an eastern exchange.

"Most men in my trouble," he said, "would have gone to Canada. I didn't have money enough to get so far away, so I changed my name from James Emerson Smith to James Emerson, borrowed a leaky yawl, packed in some clothing and a few standard articles of food, took my wife and two children out to Sheep Island, and lived there quietly until the clouds rolled by and copper was shining once more.

"Unless you have tried it, you cannot imagine how cheaply a family can live on a wooded island in Penobscot bay. There are enough flat limestone lying loose on any of the islands to build a palace, and wood for fuel can be had from the growth which crowns the top of every island, though got most of mine from the driftwood, which floated ashore at my doorstep. There are fat clams all along shore for the digging, cunners enough to last a family a week can be caught on a bent pin in half an hour's fishing; two marlin pots will supply all the lobsters you want; there are cod and hake and mackerel swimming all around you and waiting to be caught; with a shotgun you can kill wild ducks and snipe and plover, and with free rent and no taxes and no company to entertain you can live for almost nothing.

"A neighbor of mine who built a stone cottage for his family on Monroe island told me the actual money cost of keeping himself, wife and three children for a year was less than $30. I cannot say how much I put out, for I kept no account; but it was little—not more than $40 for the two months that I was there."

POOR ENGLISH NOBLEMEN.

Many of the Titled Gentry Who Are Unable to Attend the Coronation of the King.

It must be borne in mind that the peerage of England are not, cumulatively speaking, a wealthy body. A goodly throng of them are extremely poor men. All over Great Britain and Ireland are scattered earls, viscounts, barons, who will feel themselves "summoned" to the coronation, who pride themselves on "dating back" either to William the Conqueror or the still more ancient Saxon kings, and yet whose incomes are in some cases less than $5,000 or $6,000 a year. This is the pathetic side of the grand national demonstration, says Woman's Home Companion. We Americans think of it as a gathering of commingled birth and wealth. But in reality it will be nothing of the sort. It will be a pomp and splendor masking in the main much ardent and pitiful struggle. Heart-burnings, innumerable will smolder unseen during the enactment of this demonstration. The smart set and the landed noblemen who choose rarely to come up to town, yet who own lordly halls in the country, with troops of servants and well-filled stables—these will treat the whole glittering manifestation with an easy attitude of deference. But these will be a mere comparative handful, and hosts of their equal in "birth" and rank will suffer torments of the most pinching economy to achieve what they carelessly and jauntily carry off.

JAPANESE RESTRICTED

Check on Immigration.
"American Fever" Abated.

The following items regarding Japanese labor are from the Weekly Hawaii Shippo of yesterday. With regard to the extract from a Tokio paper, its substance was published as a rumor following the arrival of the Korea from Japan last week:

The number of emigrants to Hawaii, allowed by the government to the immigration companies, since January last had been five hundred per steamer. But this has been changed by the ordinance of March 28, 1905, issued by the Foreign Minister to the immigration companies. From April 1, until further notice the number of both male and female emigrants will be reduced to two hundred (the females to be none other but the wives of male emigrants, but the children under twelve years of age are not included in the number), of which the number of adult males shall not exceed one hundred per steamer.—The Tokio Asahi, March 29.

From the Waialua plantation a correspondent of this paper wrote yesterday that since the intention of the planters for increasing their wages became known, the "American fever" among the laborers has abated to a marked degree. Many of them who were ready to depart for the mainland have decided to stay, pending the action of the planters. The correspondent predicts that if the rumored two dollars raise become fact, it will greatly reduce the present exodus of the laborers to the mainland, if not altogether.

About 2000 Japanese laborers left here for the coast during the past two weeks, distributed as follows:

April 1—By S. S. Manchuria.....900
" 5—By S. S. Alameda.....150
" 12—By S. S. Sonoma.....700
" 14—By S. S. Korea.....700

The S. S. Olympia which is expected at any time is to carry away at least 400 more.

HOT SHOT FIRED BY MR WOOLLEY

He felt safe in saying that high license would become as unpopular as it has been popular.

"The business of the government is not to make money so much as it should be to make homes and people happy and prosperity for its citizens. Every saloon in business takes away your happiness from your homes, and it takes away your manhood and your womanhood. If the saloon is successful, the school fails.

"I read in the paper yesterday that the Legislature had passed a usury bill, to prevent any one from charging a man more than two per cent per month for money loaned. That is an endeavor to protect a man who promises to pay more than he should for the use of money. The government says to the money lender, 'You shall not overcharge these men, because they upon these men by taking their promises to pay any unlawful interest. That is the right protection to a man.'"

Mr. Woolley then went on to draw a parallel in the duty of the government to protect the citizen from the saloonkeeper as from the usurer.

"Fight the liquor traffic to the finish."

PETITION TO GOVERNOR.

As a result of the business men's meeting on Saturday against the liquor law, petitions have been circulated in consonance with the meeting and these have been very generally signed. One is directed to the Governor, asking him to veto the bill. Others are directed to the Senate and the House, asking them to sustain the Governor's veto.

AT THE Y. M. C. A.

John G. Woolley spoke at the 4 p. m. meeting of the Y. M. C. A. yesterday, making a forceful address on the temperance question. He urged the people to rise today in their strength and make a fight for the principle of temperance. Mr. Bowen spoke of the petitions being circulated and made an appeal for Christians to take a decided stand on the question.

"HOTELS" A SUBTERFUGE.

At the business men's meeting one of the principal features was the statement made by Lorin Andrews that the hotel clause in the liquor bill is a dangerous factor. He said the "hotel" idea had been found in New York to be pernicious. A man could hire an ordinary sized room, partition it off to make five rooms, and thus have a "hotel" within the meaning of the bill. This would give him the privilege to hawk liquor in his place. In this way a "hotel" saloon could be started up in almost any part of the city, although now restricted against saloons proper.
